Absolute Power Corrupts Absolutely

Many years ago, the young Bangler embarked on a political career - a good-natured and mild-mannered fellow, he quickly gained the support of electors and was voted into office. Within a few months, Bangler realised that he liked power and set his heart to obtaining it at any cost.

Gradually, his motivations, like his methods, changed for the worse. The idealistic, young, would-be-politician slowly turned into a power-crazed monster. Harnessing the power of corrupt individuals within the police force and army, Bangler's rise was meteroic. Bangler rose steadlily through the ranks of local government, national government and eventually won a seat on the World Government. His final alliance, with the international criminal fraternity, tipped the scales in his favour - Bangler finally suceeded in becoming President of The World.

Revolutionary Fervour

Democracy rapidly crumbled, once Bangler seized control of the planet - he was hardly likely to run the risk of standing in another election, now that he had schemed his way to the top. A few idealistic fellows continued to argue the merits of free elections and true representation of the people, but one by one they disappeared in mysterious (but always bloody) circumstances. Now Bangler's corrupt policemen and soldiers patrol the streets of every town and city on the globe, snuffing out the spark of dissent before the flames of revolution can catch...

The cause of Good is not totally lost, however. A research scientist by the name of Mulk still controls a vast underground laboratory set up by a previous World Government to research into robotics. Mulk and his staff are inspired by revolutionary fervour (well, Bangler did cut off their research grant the moment he took power), and they have decided that it is time to rid the world of the Big Bad Guy.

In the image of Man, Mulk and his mates created two assassination machines. Not from clay, but from the finest molybdeno-tinanium. These robotic Ninjas are the ultimate in programmable killing kit. The ultimate in killing kit, anyway - Mulk's team of scientists doesn't include programmers, so the Ninjas have to be controlled manually from a console that links into their servo systems via a high-band microwave link.

Mulk has sent his robo-killers onto the surface, and they're on a mission to rid the planet of its evil ruler. The long road to Bangler's fortified mansion awaits...

The Bangler Dash

Mulk has delegated the task of controlling his Ninja killers to you - sitting in front of the control console, your first task is to get the hang of Ninja operation. RTFM, as they say in the trade. Done that? Right... let the battle commence.

Five zones have to be penetrated on the journey to Bangler's hideout. Armed only with flesh-rending knives and a supply of magic-combatting shuriken stars, the two robo-killers have to be controlled with a fine degree of precision if the mission to murder Bangler is to succeed.

Bangler's henchmen are dotted throughout all six levels (only 5 levels on 520ST with single sided disk drive). Dodge and kill Bangler's ruthless troops who are armed with knives, guns and grenades – and watch out for the killer dogs from the Barkie Brigade! Just when things are going well, Bangler's magicians are likely to transport a seriously hard opponent into your part of the world. The magicians have some serious surprises in store, including the Hunchback Ground Spider, Ninja Swordlady, Iron Arm, Fire Breather, Sniper Bats, 3SVOs (laser-firing droids) and Giant Tank

Conflict commences in a Slum Zone, where death stalks the streets then the combat moves on to the Military Base. As night falls, the route to Bangler's lair takes our robo-heroes onto the mean city streets. Then it's on to the final stages: in order to penetrate the high security of Bangler's mansion the dynamic duo need to tarry awhile in the sewers - before facing up the to Evil Fat One himself...

Sharp reflexes, a will to win and an uninterruptible high-band microwave link are the keys to success. Mulk has provided the robo-ninjas and the control equipment - can you provide the rest?
